Waves Break Over the Pier at Old Point.

For a Special Offer We Sell Scene at Buckroebeach

Meeting of the Peninsula Guards.
Light Artillery Company

The gale which swept over this city all day yesterday and last night was one of the flercest storms that has visited this section for a long time.

Although little damage was doen the scene on the coast was beyond de-Attough fitte dange was even on the coast was beyond description.

Waves towering mountain high broke on the beach, throwing the spray many feet into the air.

At Old Point the scene was terribly grand. The waves thundered against the breakwater in front of the hotels with frightful velocity, and sent the spray high up against the walls of the buildings.

Occasionally a burge briow would break over the sea wall and tumber along the porch of the Hygeia.

Waves broke entirely over the government pier and the landings where the little launches tie up were entirely word the If you wish to have a nice waves broke entirely over the sortenment pler and the landings where the little launches tie up were entirely under water.

Out in the harbor the vessels of the flying squadron were heavily rolling from side to side, and the sailing ships at anchor in the Roads looked as if they would stand on their ends.

About 11 o'clock in the morning one of the most exciting incidents of the day occurred. One of the launches of the flagship Brooklyn attempted to make the trip from the pier to the vessel. For a hundred yards or more everything went well, when suddenly the little boat disappeared as completely as if the waters had swallowed her. For several seconds the anxlety of those who stood on the wharf was intense, but the launch was seen on the creat of the next wave successfully riding the yeasty billows. Many times during the trip out the little vessel was entirely lost to view and those on shore were afraid that she would be swamped. However, she shally succeeded in reaching the flagship in safety.

AT BUCKROE BEACH.

At Buckroe Beach the waves were affold Point. They beat upon the new breakwater in a manner that threatmed to tear it all to pieces. It sustained little damage, however. It is thought in all probability that great harm has been done to the pounds which are located in Chesapeake Bay, just off the beach. Most of the nets will probably be broken.

just off the beach. Most of the nets will probably be broken.

IN THE CREEKS.

While the tide in Mill and Hampton crocks was extremely high and the water was rough, no damage of consequence was done. A number of yards along the water front were stooded and on the car line near Mill crock the water was up even with the tracks. None of the oyster or fishing boats ventured out of the creek.

The Northampton made her trip from Norfolk to Old Point, but did not attempt to go up the bay. The Granite City, of the Willoughby Spit line, did not venture out at all. The Hampton to Norfolk, as usual. All of the bay steamers left on their regular trips last night, but were rocking considerably all the time.

LIGHT ARTILLERY.

LIGHT ARTILLERY.

Talk of Organizing a Battery in Hampton. For several days there has been talk of organizing a battery of light artillery in Hampton, and a number of gentlemen have expressed as being in favor of the movement. It is doubtful whether the requisite number of men could be secured to form a battery in this city.

A prominent gentleman who is interested in the matter and desires to see it well under way, had this to say yesterday:

terested in the matter and desires to see it well under way, had this to say yesterday:

"Yes; I for one am very anxious to see a good battery of artillery formed in this section, but don't think there would be enough men willing to enlist in it to make it a success. At this time a battery of light artillery would be a great help to the government forces at Fort Monroe. When the organization of the battery is assured—if it ever is—I should think that the place to mount the guns would be on Hampton Roads, midway between here and Newport News. Situated there the gins would command the Roads to a great extent and, if by any accident, a Spanish warship should gelp past. Fort Monroe, could make a strong fight to keep the ship from going any further. At present if a ship passed the fort it could enaily proceed to Newport News and destroy the shipyard, and could then go to Portamouth and destroy the navy yard, after which it could run up to Richmond and bömbard that city.

"Taking everything into consideration, I think that a battery of light guns would be of great service in this section of the State and hope that one may be established. I have talked with a number of gentlemen who agree with me that a battery would be a better organization than a division of the naval reserves. A home guard is what we are art to need if the troops are

There was a meeting and drill of the Peninsula Guards at the armory last night, and although a number of recruits were sworn in the number of volunteers for Cuban service has not yet reached the figures required by the Governor. Captain Hone said yesterday that fifty-five have been secured but the Governor says that the number must be eighty-four. Capt. Hope is confident that he will soon secure the necessary number, as he s doing everything in his power to brins, about this result. SAVED THE SHIP.

Fireman's Presence of Mind Averted an Awful Calamity.

A second-class fireman serving on one of the smaller U. S. cruibers had his head about him when the magazine of his ship was threatened, a few years ago, and he has had the much better rating of a water-tender ever since. One of his shipmates of the black gang was cleaning his section of the after engine-room biges one morning. His particular section of the bilges was on the starboard side of the extreme after part of the engine-room. extreme after part of the engine-room. Immediately aft of the engine-room was the ship's magazine, separated from the engine-room by a steel partifrom the engine-room by a steel partition. Bilges are cleaned with turpentine-soaked waste. The bilge-cleaner, too lazy to fill one of the small turpentine cans provided for the purpose, dragged a five-gallon can of turpentine to his bilge station and began work. Smoking is strictly prohibited in the engine-rooms of a man-of-war, on account of the large amount of combustible stores necessarily stowed below. This bilge-cleaner was a reckless sort of blade, however, and when he had got his bilge-cleaning inder way he took out his pipe and lit it, carelessly chucking the match in the way he took out his pipe and lit it, carelessly churking the match in the bilge. There was some turpentine in bilge, and the match, still aglow, set it into a flame. The bilge-cleaner jumped to his fect, and in doing so he overturned the five gallons of turpentine. Then the bilge was converted into a roaring mass of flame that shot to the berth-deck gratings and played directly against the steel bulkhead asparating the engine-room from the magazine. The careless bilge-cleaner was scorched, and he bolted for the spar deck yelling like a madman. The second-class fireman with the head on him was the only other man in the after engine-room at the time this happened. He made a jump for the bilge-covers that had been removed by his reckless mate, and, although severely covers that had been removed by his covers that had been removed by his LARD-meekless mate, and although severely burned while doing it, he thrust them over the bilges. Then he seized a wrench and knocked open one of the intakes from the sea, letting water directly into the bilge that was in flames. The water came in so rapidly that it knocked the bilge-covers off, but it drowned the fire. There was more than a foot of water in the engine-rooms before the intake could 2 red, 1 flames. The water came in so rapidly that it knocked the bilge-covers off, but it drowned the fire. There was more than a foot of water in the engine-rooms before the intake could be closed again, but that was a small matter compared with what might have happened had the hot turpentine flame lapped the magazine bulkhoad much longer. By the time fire quarters was sounded and the men on deck got down below the second-class fireman, with his hair and eyebrows all burned off and the skin peeling from his face and hands, was throwing bucketful after hicketful of the incare. burned off and the skin peeling from his face and hands, was throwing bucketful after bucketful of the incoming sea water against the steel bulkhead, which was already so hot that it sent back clouds of steam.
